

Editor's Note

AMJ 2021 17(9)

Editor's Note

Rick Steves

Managing Editor

Australasian Medical Journal

E-mail: medicallsci@medicineinsights.com

Dear Readers,

Season's greetings!

We are excited to present the ninth issue of AMJ for 2024. This issue features a collection of original research papers, case studies, and review articles, along with a spotlight on the notable contributions made throughout the year.

We extend our heartfelt gratitude to all our readers for their continued interest and support of AMJ. Our commitment to upholding a rigorous review process and maintaining the highest standards of quality in every issue remains steadfast. In this regard, we would like to thank the dedicated AMJ editorial team for their hard work in evaluating manuscripts, overseeing the publication process, and providing prompt feedback to authors.

We also want to express our deep appreciation to the members of our editorial board, who have supported the journal since its early days and continue to play a crucial role in its growth. A special thank you goes to our peer reviewers, whose time and dedication ensure that every article meets our standards for scientific integrity and excellence.

AMJ was established with the goal of assisting early-career researchers and authors from developing countries as they navigate the complex process of preparing and publishing scholarly work. We remain devoted to this mission, while also celebrating the increasing number of submissions we now receive from prominent researchers in Australia, Saudi Arabia, the United States, and beyond—further proof of our ongoing commitment to quality.

As we look forward to future achievements and growth, we invite you to join our team of reviewers or recommend suitable colleagues. We also encourage you to submit your own research for publication in AMJ and to share the journal with others as a reliable platform for academic research.

For any questions, please don't hesitate to reach out to the AMJ editorial team. Wishing you a successful and prosperous year ahead!

Sincerely,

Rick Steves

Managing Editor

Australasian Medical Journal