Dear Readers,

I am pleased to introduce the eleventh issue of the 2024 edition of the Australasian Medical Journal (AMJ). Since its launch in 2008, AMJ has remained dedicated to publishing high-quality academic and systematic research on a monthly basis. Each issue presents a wide range of article types, including original research, reviews, case reports, case studies, letters to the editor, commentaries, and opinion pieces.

AMJ was established with the goal of offering researchers from developing countries a platform to share their valuable findings. While we continue to uphold this vision, we are also proud to welcome an increasing number of submissions from esteemed scholars around the globe, including those from Australia, Saudi Arabia, China, the United States, Morocco, Nigeria, South Africa, Denmark, and beyond.

The primary aim of the journal is to highlight advancements in medical science and healthcare, with a special emphasis on contributions from the Australasian region. AMJ's content is widely indexed in numerous global abstracting and indexing databases. Currently, we are preparing the twelfth issue of volume 17. This year, the journal has featured a wide array of peer-reviewed articles on critical topics such as oesophageal carcinoma, cardiovascular and vascular health, 3D printing technology, shear wave elastography, diabetes, HIV/AIDS, geriatric medicine, nutritional studies, and haemodynamic research. These topics represent some of the most urgent global medical challenges today.

I would like to express my heartfelt appreciation to the authors for entrusting AMJ with their valuable work. I also extend my sincere thanks to our dedicated editorial team and peer reviewers, whose meticulous efforts ensure the timely release of each issue and contribute to the journal's ongoing growth. Their commitment helps us continually meet the needs of our diverse readership.

Looking ahead, I wish the journal's management team continued success as they work toward further development and the publication of both regular and special issues. We are excited about the journal's future achievements and invite you to join us as a reviewer or suggest potential reviewers to support our mission.

We also encourage you to submit your research papers and recommend AMJ to your colleagues as a trusted platform for academic publication. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to reach out to the AMJ Editor via email.
