

Editor's Note

AMJ 2025 18(04)

Editor's Note

Rick Steves

Managing Editor
Australasian Medical Journal
E-mail: medicalsci@medicineinsights.com

Sincerely,

Rick Steves

Managing Editor
Australasian Medical Journal

Dear Readers,

Season's greetings!

We are delighted to present the fourth edition of the Australasian Medical Journal (AMJ) for 2025.

This issue includes a selection of original research papers and case studies, but more importantly, it serves as a reflection and celebration of the contributions made throughout the year. We take this opportunity to extend our heartfelt appreciation to our readers, authors, and the broader academic community for your continued interest and engagement with AMJ.

We remain committed to upholding a rigorous and timely peer review process, and we are especially grateful to our dedicated editorial team for their consistent coordination with authors and their diligence in overseeing the publication process. Their efforts have been instrumental in maintaining the journal's academic integrity and efficiency.

A special note of thanks goes to our esteemed editorial board members, many of whom have been with AMJ since its inception. Their ongoing guidance and expertise continue to shape the journal's success. We are equally appreciative of our peer reviewers, whose thoughtful evaluations ensure each article meets the highest standards of scientific quality and ethical publishing.

AMJ was founded to support emerging researchers—particularly those from developing countries—by demystifying the publication process and providing a platform for their work. We remain deeply committed to this mission. At the same time, we are honored to receive submissions from respected scholars in the United States, Australia, Saudi Arabia, Italy, and beyond, reinforcing our standing as a credible international journal.

Looking ahead, we are excited about the journal's continued growth and impact. We invite you to contribute by submitting your research, recommending AMJ to your peers, or joining our reviewer community. If you would like to nominate yourself or others as reviewers, we warmly welcome your participation.

For any inquiries, please feel free to contact the AMJ Editor via email.

Wishing you a joyful season 2025!